She served as deputy executive director of HLAA from 2008-2016, and has been Executive Director since then. Through her long-time efforts with numerous aspects of this powerful organization, she has had an enormous impact on the world of hearing loss nationwide.

The Hearing Loss Association of America, founded in 1979, with headquarters now located in Bethesda, MD, opens the world of communication to people with hearing loss through information, education, advocacy and support.

HLAA has an extensive network of chapters and state organizations, and in addition to publishing its bimonthly Hearing Loss Magazine, holds annual Conventions, produces the Walk4Hearing, and advocates for people with hearing loss.
